Typing in a Foreign Language Using the On-Screen Keyboard

This computer has the Microsoft Language Bar installed with some common language keyboards.

To switch to a new language click on the icon in the system tray on the lower right, and select the language you want to type in.

To start up the on-screen keyboard, click the Windows start menu button, and type on screen keyboard into the search box. Click on the option when it appears under Programs.

With the on-screen keyboard running, you can either click on the keys or just type them with the physical keyboard.

Once you have selected your language, you may also need to select a keyboard. In particular, if the keyboard US is selected, you should pick a different one to get the alphabet you need.

For more information, check out the Research Guide: http://libguides.uky.edu/typingLOTE